Sannino is Watford's new manager, Cusatis is with him

Pubblicato: Venerdì 20 Dicembre 2013

“Welcome to Watford.” Maybe there is a hint on the English football club's website, next to the concentrated face of Beppe Sannino, in a picture that makes official the hiring of the coach from Ottaviano, as helm of the “hornets”. So, the voices of yesterday have been confirmed between last night and this morning and, from now on, the ex coach of Varese is all-out the new manager of the Yellow Army, replacing the outgoing Gianfranco Zola.

But Sannino is not the only coach who moved from the province of Varese to the staff of Watford: beside him, in fact, there will be also Giovanni Cusatis (photo below), who, in 2012, was at the helm of Varese. He is Sannino's friend from far back, and they already collaborated during the short experience with Chievo football club.

The adventure of Sannino will start immediately. Indeed, according to the Watford website, the manager is completely at the club disposal and he will be present at the next first team's training. The Italian manager's debut is expected to be Saturday at 3 p.m. at Portman Road, the Ipswich Town's stadium, one of the once mighty English football teams.

Now, Ipswich is 5 victories ahead of the Watford (30 against 25) and both teams are ranking in the middle position in the Championship.

Ahead, instead, there are the Londoners of the Queens Park Rangers of Redknapp.
